Great Industrial Developments on Foot in Bluefield Section, According to Prominent Business Man.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

Roanoke, Va., March 10.—A prominent Bluefield business man here last night told of great industrial developments that appear to be on foot in that section, chief among which is the possibility of a trolley line to the coal fields, an enormous electrical plant and a gas company which will supply Bluefield and Graham. He gave the further assurance that additional macadam streets are to be laid this year. This visitor was of the opinion that the New River Power Project and that the New River Development Company is a ruse by which it is planned that the lines of the Virginian Railway may enter Bluefield and the Pocahontas coal field.

CHURCH IS CROWDED

May Be Necessary to Move Grove Avenue Services to Auditorium.

So many people who desired to attend the services were turned away from Grove Avenue Baptist Church last night that the advisability of moving the series of revival services to the City Auditorium is already being discussed. The building proved utterly inadequate to hold those who wished to hear Dr. H. M. Wharton.

Great interest was manifested, and there were twenty or more professions of religion. Dr. Wharton spoke from the text, "I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest," and was heard with the utmost attention.

Dr. W. C. James, the pastor, announced that there will be no services to-night, but that Dr. Wharton will preach Sunday morning and night.

TALKS OF MODERN BUSINESS METHOD

Organization Expert Addresses Railroad Club About Problems of Day.

HONOR SYSTEM COMMENDED

Mayor Hine Refers to Chief Clerk Method as Relic of Feudalism.

Members of the Richmond Railroad Club, including all departments from presidents to clerks, assembled at Murphy's Hotel last night and listened with much interest to the lecture of Major Charles Hine on "Modern Organization," which dealt with intimate knowledge of every department of railroad organization. It was the speech of a man who by years of experience had become fully acquainted with everything that pertains to the conduct of a big railroad system. He preached the doctrine of getting away from red tape and of placing all departments on a basis that makes for the greatest efficiency for the corporations and the best results for the employees.

It was a speech that reached in one point or another every man who calls himself a railroad man, from the section hand to the president, and each got good advice from one who has for years been associated with the greatest railroad systems in the country.

Aside from the applause, which was frequent, the only interruption during Major Hine's speech was when Secretary Fred Robertson became provoked, tipped his chair back a little too far and tumbled from the rostrum with great noise. Men rushed from their seats to pick him up, but aside from being a bit dazed for the moment there was no harm done, and the lecture was resumed.

Dr. Robertson, however, after the fall chose to let his chair remain on the ground floor until the meeting adjourned.

Plan of Organization.

Major Hine, being a graduate of West Point and a veteran of the Spanish-American War, took the Confederate Army as the best example of organization and followed out the ideal organization of a railroad with it as a model as far as a commercial entity is comparable with the fighting force of a nation. In speaking of this city as the capital of the Confederacy, he also paid a tribute to it from the view point of a railroad man, saying that the roads centering in Richmond were second to none similarly situated in the United States, and therefore in the world. As a matter of fact he is in this city for the purpose of studying the methods of the Chesapeake and Ohio and the Norfolk and Western with a view of inaugurating some of them on the Erie.

He laid particular stress on the importance of making the man on the inside familiar with what was going on on the outside, and of various innovations which have proved successful and beneficial on the Harriman lines. One of these was an "honor system," which he said was very similar to that in vogue at the University of Virginia. He looked upon the chief clerk system as a relic of feudalism, holding that a responsible official should at all times be in charge of every department and that the practice of a clerk signing the name of his employer to communications and orders tended to disorganize any system. In the mobilization of forces for the best results, he explained, it was not the custom to go away with any employees, but when places were made vacant in the usual course of events, the policy was to distribute the salary of the man going out among the others, when not necessary to employ new men.

Former Army Man.

Major Hine has been well known in railroad circles since July, 1908, when he became the organization expert of the Harriman lines. In 1903, while a lieutenant in the United States Army, he resigned his commission and began his railroad career as a brakeman. Since that time he has been with many systems in various capacities. During the Spanish-American War he left the railroad business temporarily and served as major of volunteers. He is also a magazine writer of some note, having contributed many articles, chiefly on subjects pertaining to railroads. Major Hine is a native of this State, having been born at Vienna, near Washington. He was introduced last night by President William H. White, of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad.

Seven new members were elected to the club and eighteen recommended for election at the next meeting. Dinner was served after the meeting.

MANY FARMERS ATTEND

Institute Speakers Greeted by Large Gathering at Amelia.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

Amelia, Va., March 10.—The melted snow and muddy roads did not deter a great many farmers from attending the Southern Railway Farmers' Institute, train meeting, held here to-day. Professor J. D. Harris extended the use of the assembly room at the High School, and a large audience filled the hall, farmers coming from many miles to attend.

Institute Director J. J. Owen had charge of the speakers, and presented Mr. Zinn, of West Virginia, as the first speaker. He gave an instructive talk on "Soil Improvement." J. F. Goring, of Appomattox, spoke next on "The Relation of Fertilizers and Their Combination to Grow Maximum Crops of Tobacco," and Dr. Freeman, of Richmond, spoke on "Public Health."

All the speakers spoke in the high east terms of the splendid school building. The school will be dedicated on March 24, with an attractive program.
